Inside an International Wildlife Trafficking Syndicate: Lessons in Creatures, Crime and Storytelling

October 27, 2009

Uris G01—6 - 7:30pm

Description: Bryan Christy will speak on the important but little-discussed issue of the illegal wildlife trade. Christy is author of the fascinating book, "The Lizard King: True Crimes and Passions of the World's Greatest Reptile Smugglers." The talk should appeal to a broad range of interests, addressing diverse topics such as conservation, economics, organized crime, law enforcement, environmental policy, and international affairs. According to the About the Author, "While researching this book he was bitten between the eyes by a blood python, chased by a mother alligator, sprayed by a bird-eating tarantula, and ejaculated on by a Bengal tiger." In addition to these anecdotes, Christy also has a distinguished past, including study at our very own Cornell. You can read more about him and his book at <thelizardkingbook.com>. Of further note, "The Lizard King" has been optioned for a film adaptation by the director of "The Devil Wears Prada" and "Marley & Me."

This event is co-sponsored and funded in part by Society for Natural Resources Conservation, Sustainability Hub, Kyoto Now!, Veterinarians Interested in Developing Areas, and Zoo and Wildlife Society.

The CDO has created a series of publications called Ready Reference Sheets which are designed to assist you by:
